AN OPERATION THAT FAILED

Criminal Tendencies Not Removed—Marshal Miller Plays a Part

Every now and then somebody makes a discovery that has merit in it and promises to be of benefit to the race, but it falls into the hands of the enthusiasts who work it to death. One of these that is of comparatively recent date is the fact that in some cases criminal tendencies are caused by some physical defect. That seems to be about as far as the fact is established. Reasoning from that premise, the way seemed clear to certain reformers, to reform the world by use of the surgeon's knife. The process of reasoning is so simple to some minds that already the jails are done away with and the hospitals are multiplied in their place. The only thing necessary apparently is that the doctors trust takes up the matter seriously; when they do this, we shall all have to go on the operating table at frequent intervals, for just as sure as surgery will reform us for a time is the fact that we shall get tired of being good and will seek a specific that shall open the old wound or give the old twist to the muscles again so that the world to us may not be a place of barren mediocrity where there shall be no variety except in the degree of our goodness. These reflections are inspired by a news item which we find in the Sierra Madre News. Fred Strong, 45 years old, a native of that city, is (or was) a thief. His specialty was petty larceny of things so small that he long escaped falling into the meshes of the law. Two months ago he was brought up before Judge Hutton of Los Angeles on a chicken stealing charge. Several of his tender-hearted neighbors appeared before the court and represented that the prisoner was mentally unbalanced. An operation was ordered upon the weak-minded Strong. He was sent to the hospital but the doctor in charge was averse to performing the operation and turned the man loose. A few nights later a Mr. John Wright, without inquiring anything about the thief's mental processes, shot at a man who was robbing his hen house. The robber was wounded in the arm and proved to be the man Strong. This time Judge Hutton insisted that the operation be performed and they say it was a success, surgically speaking. We quote from the News, the interesting sequel:

"With his head still bandaged, Strong hired a valuable team at the Phelps livery, 609 East Seventh street. He then drove to the La Canada ranch of Senator Frank Flint and swapped the horses for a pair of mules, a wagon and $225 in cash.

He then drove to Burbank, where he disposed of the mules to another liveryman for a horse and wagon and another cash consideration. Then he turned up in Sierra Madre.

His arrest followed. The prisoner is now in jail awaiting arraignment."

In connection with the above we find that Marshal Miller played quite an important part in this drama. A week ago Tuesday he received notice from the Pasadena police department that a pair of fine horses had been stolen from 609 East Seventh street Los Angeles, and that they had been sold to Senator Flint at La Canada who paid $225 for them in addition to a pair of mules and a set of harness. Miller found out that a suspicious outfit had passed through Glendale and taking his motorcycle started out on the trail. At that time, however, he did not possess all of these particulars and when he found the man camping on West Fourth street, he considered him merely a suspicious character. The marshal kept an eye upon him and when he started north he followed him to Burbank. At that place he tried to cash a check which had been given him by Mr. Flint, but as he could not furnish proof of identity, was unsuccessful. The marshal at that time thought he had to deal with a check forger and kept on the trail toward San Fernando. Overtaking the man near the Tejunga he engaged him in conversation and had his suspicions confirmed but did not arrest him until later when the fellow abandoned the team and ran away into the brush near Roscoe. After quite a search he found him and arrested him on general principles, feeling sure that he was a criminal of some sort. He took him and the outfit to Glendale and telephoned the Los Angeles authorities who gladly came out and gathered their victim in, expressing their gratification at the capture of the man who had several times been an inmate of the county jail on various charges as mentioned above.

THE WATER QUESTION

Continues to be Agitated—Resolutions Adopted at Valley Improvement Association Meeting—To be Discussed at Chamber of Commerce Tonight

Everybody agrees that water is a good and most necessary thing to have, and in this community it is pretty safe to assert that at that point the agreement ends. At the last meeting of the water commission in the city hall there was an insistent demand that the city trustees "Do something," and a resolution asking them to call an election for a bond issue of $225,000 was passed almost unanimously. Acting upon that recommendation, the trustees at their next meeting instructed the city attorney to draw up the necessary ordinance for an election for this purpose and to secure money for parks, etc.

Thursday evening of last week at a meeting of the Valley Improvement Association a resolution passed after an evening's discussion, as follows:

Resolved, That it be the sense of this meeting that the trustees of the city of Glendale will not call a bond election for a municipal water plant until a definite proposition is given to the city by the city of Los Angeles in reference to the cost of the aqueduct water.

This motion was made by Mr. Payne seconded by Mr. C. F. Parker. Mr. Usilton moved that it be laid on the table, but this motion was lost and the resolution adopted.

Mr. Bailey, who is connected with the Los Angeles water commission and who is a resident of Glendale, was present. He stated that the Owens River water is expected by March 1st, 1913, but at present the commission is not prepared to make any definite proposal to the city of Glendale.

There was a good audience present, probably more than a hundred people, although the band concert doubtless kept many away. Chairman Willisford presided. Mr. H. B. Lynch read a statement giving much information on the subject of the evening's discussion. Afterwards he replied very satisfactorily to a number of questions. Mr. W. E. Evans, city attorney, gave an interesting sketch of the water question as applying to this section from the first grant to the "Pueblo of Los Angeles" in 1786. He replied to a number of questions as to the legal status of the water, saying among other things that the right of this section to its water supply had never been questioned by Los Angeles. Mayor T. W. Watson also spoke on the subject. He expressed himself in favor of keeping abreast of the times; the trend of the times is in the direction of municipal ownership of public utilities and as Glendale has made a success of its municipally owned lighting system, he believed it could do the same with the water. He favored obtaining possession as far as practicable and at a fair valuation of the property of the local companies. This would solve the question for the present and for a consideable time to come. Mr. Watson also answered several questions.

One or two of the speakers became almost unparliamentary, wanting to know what the trustees were "trying to put over them" in foisting a "rotten water system" on the public, an inuendo which Messrs. Watson and Lane of the trustees naturally resented and made effective replies.

A special meeting of the stockholders of the Verdugo Pipe and Reservoir Company was called to meet at the city hall Wednesday evening, to discuss the matter of selling out to the city. The president of the company, Mr. J. C. Sherer, acted as chairman. Mr. H. B. Lynch presented the question for the city. Mr. M. A. King made a motion that "It is the sense of the meeting that we do not sell to the City of Glendale our interest in the Verdugo Pipe and Reservoir Company." After considerable discussion, the motion carried by a two-thirds majority. Adjournment was made to meet again in the same place, Wednesday evening, August 21.

The stock of the Reservoir Company represents no water except the interest in a well of twelve or fifteen inch capacity which is only used in emergencies. The same stockholders are owners of water rights apportioned to their land, in Verdugo Canyon, aggregating about 1,350 shares, or ten-thousandths. The proposition discussed was the purchase of the distributing system at an appraised valuation, and the purchase of the water from individuals if the latter wished to sell. The action of the meeting was entirely unofficial.

GLENDALE, CAL., AUGUST 2, 1912

Of a dozen different "Initiative" petitions in circulation for changes in our poor old patched-up constitution, only three are likely to be perfected within the time limit. Life is still full of compensations.

Citizens of Edendale have made formal charges against Mayor Alexander to the city council of Los Angeles, charging him with neglect of duty in not enforcing the laws governing railroads and streets, having reference to the occupation of Alessandro street by the Pacific Electric Railway company.

The battle field of Mukden where in their retreat from the victorious Japanese the Russians left thousands of their dead, has been made by Japan into one vast cemetery; graves appropriately marked and a splendid monument to the valor of their enemies has been erected by the conquerors.

The Downey Champion entered last Saturday the 25th year of its publication and is still edited by its originator and proprietor, Mr. C. H. Eberle.

Mr. Eberle is a California pioneer as well as a pioneer newspaper man in Los Angeles county, and has played many important parts in the upbuilding of the state. We congratulate him on the mile post just passed and hope that he may keep his name at the head of the Champion's columns for at least twenty-five years more.

If subscribers will notice the date given on their paper, they will know how their subscription account stands and will confer a favor by remitting or leaving at the office. The publisher should not be compelled to be at the expense of sending out a collector. The law of the postoffice department prohibits the sending out as second class matter any newspaper for which the subscriber is more than one year in arrears.

The city of Hollywood is considering the purchase of the plant of the Union Hollywood Water company. A committee of the board of trade appointed to look into the matter of securing Owens River water are of the opinion that the proposed assessment plan of the city of Los Angeles is unfair, as it compels the people of their section to put up money for an improvement in which the whole city will benefit.

Owen Wister, one of the brightest and best of American authors, has purchased 3300 acres of land at El Cajon in San Diego county where he proposes to go into the business of raising eucalyptus. We hope that Mr. Wister will experience no disappointments that may cause him to feel that he has a grudge against California, for we shall be proud to claim him as a fellow citizen. But the eucalyptus business is more elusive than the poultry industry and Owen's experience is likely to prove expensive.

THE FACTS IN THE CASE.

President Taft has approved the statement given out by Manager Hilles which is a full and judicial review of the proceedings of the Republican convention at Chicago. No single case is evaded and the entire falsity of the charges of "theft" made by the Roosevelt-Johnson-Heney-Earl, etc. combination, is made clear. No fair-minded citizen can read this statement without at least admitting the possibility that he may have been misled by the partisan statements of the "Progressive" organs which have systematically carried on a campaign of misrepresentation for many months past. We quote the reference to the California case.

The California Case.

"The Fourth Congressional District of California held this question: Under the state law, the delegation, two from each district, was elected on a general ticket in a group of twenty-six. Each delegate might either express his presidential preference or agree to vote for the presidential candidate receiving the highest number in the state. In the Fourth district the candidates from that district on the Taft ticket expressed a preference for Taft, but did not agree to vote for the candidates having the highest state vote. The Taft delegates in the Fourth district received a majority of 200 more than the Roosevelt delegates in that district. The national call forbade any law or the acceptance of any law which prevented the election of delegates by districts. In other words the call of the national committee was at variance with the state law. The state law sought to enforce the state unit rule, and required the whole twenty-six delegates to be voted for all over the state, assigning two to each district to abide by the state-wide election, while the Republican National convention has insisted upon the unit of the district since 1880. That has been the party law. This convention recognized the party law and held it to be more binding than that of the state law and allowed the two delegates who had received in the Fourth district a vote larger than their two opponents assigned to that district to become delegates in the convention. This was clearly lawful, for a state has no power to limit or control the basis of representation of a voluntary national party in a national convention. The fact that President Taft by telegram approved all the twenty-six delegates as representing him is said to be an estoppel against his claiming the election of two of these delegates in their Fourth district. What is there inconsistent in his approving the candidacy of all his delegates and the election of two of them? Why should he be thus estopped to claim that part of the law was inoperative because in conflict with the call of the convention?

A CONDITION THAT NEEDS RELIEF.

A portion of the city of Glendale is poorly supplied with water. Now this statement is not necessarily alarming in the sense that the condition is irremediable, for the same fact exists in many portions of Los Angeles. The inadequacy of the supply is not due to a lack of water at the head of the system which supplies that part of town, nor to any particular difficulty about securing the needful article out of the earth beneath, but solely to the inadequacy of the distributing system, and to bad management on the part of the local company. But the condition is serious, nevertheless, for the part of the city affected is building up rapidly, the demand for water is consequently increasing and as yet there is not relief in sight. It looks very much as if the people most directly interested are responsible for the delay in giving an adequate water supply to their section.

The city trustees have made an honest effort to solve the problem, but they find themselves unsupported or actively opposed by the people who are in need of relief. At a public meeting held a week ago, the trustees were hotly criticised for doing the very thing which the water commission had urged them to do, ordering a bond election to be called. They were accused of withholding information, of "putting something over" on the people, of trying to palm off "rotten water systems" on the community, etc. Some of the speakers seemed to hold the city officials responsible for the prevailing dense ignorance about water conditions, although the subject has been discussed for years. This paper has agitated the subject for years past and time and time again has explained the situation and given the history of our water rights and furnished details as to the supply.

It was noticeable at the meeting alluded to that the intelligent brief talks by the trustees and others who understood the subject, were greeted with no sign of approval, but that denunciatory oratory was followed by applause. This would seem to indicate that the subject was not being approached in the proper spirit, which is to be regretted, for the matter is a serious one and cannot be settled wisely by approaching it in a spirit of suspicion and intolerance. The plan the trustees have in regard to the water may not be the wisest, but there need be no factious opposition to letting the people vote on it. One thing may as well be acknowledged by everybody concerned, and that is that Owens river water cannot be delivered in Glendale this summer and probably not until another has past; do the people who are short of water want to go dry for an indefinite period? If the trustees have a plan for relief before another summer comes around, they had better be given a chance to put it into effect.

KINDLY MENTION.

For assemblyman from this, the sixty-first district, J. C. Sherer and Jacob M. Lampert, both of Glendale, are Republican candidates. Mr. Sherer is the editor of the GLENDALE NEWS and has been a resident there for twenty-five years or more. His home, known as "Somerset Farm," is a beautiful place on Verdugo road, between Highland Park and Glendale. He is splendidly equipped by education and temperament for a legislative office, and is one whom the people would never have occasion to charge with betraying their interests for those of the privilege seeking class which prey upon members of the legislature. He is a straight Republican, is not for a third party, and has been heard to approve of Senator Works' criticism of certain leaders of that movement.—Highland Park Herald.

J. C. Sherer, editor of the GLENDALE NEWS, advises us just before going to press this week that he has decided to enter the race for the nomination as Republican candidate for assemblyman for this the sixty-first district, subject to the primary election Sept. 3.

Editor Chas. H. Randall, of the Highland Park Herald, having withdrawn from the race to succeed himself for the same office, this leaves two candidates in the field—R. W. Ready of La Canada and Mr. Sherer.

Editor Sherer holds a high place in the estimation of his fellow newspaper workers in this county and is spoken of in the highest terms by citizens in his own town. His sympathies would naturally be with people of his own class in regard to location outside the county seat, and his profession as editor of a wide-awake weekly newspaper entitles him to the support of his newspaper friends as well as every man who wishes to see a man of high moral character, ability and unchallenged integrity represent this district in the legislature.—San Fernando Press.

J. C. Sherer of Glendale is up for assemblyman and every voter in the San Fernando Valley is duty bound to vote for this very worthy gentleman. Mr. Sherer has lived in these parts for over thirty years and knows the every need of the district he is expected to serve. We are also personally acquainted with Mr. Sherer and we can vouch for him being the right man for the place. He is not of the slick smooth politician kind hunting a soft job. Was cashier of Glendale's first bank and is now editor of the GLENDALE NEWS.—Lankershim Laconic.

SEVENTH DAY ADVENTISTS.

(Communicated.)

This week closes the meetings at the canvas auditorium, corner Brand and Fourth streets. Those in charge feel well satisfied with the attendance, and the kind treatment by the people of Glendale, and hope to see those who have attended this series of services in attendance at the large camp meeting which opens next week on Central avenue.

The Adventists can report an excellent gain in their work in Southern California, and this is also true of many other parts of the world where their work is being established. Many people everywhere are readily receiving the message of Christ's second advent in this generation, and gladly accept the teachings of the Bible which we firmly believe is just before us. The change of heart and life, so clearly taught in God's word, is the only condition which will stand the test at the awful day, so fast approaching. We believe an intelligent knowledge of God's word will enable earth's inhabitants to escape the delusions and errors of these modern times. While there will be many services held on the large camp ground with special reference to church work and interests, practically all of the night meetings will be of deep interest to any who may attend. Several hundred tents have been erected, and the grounds are to be kept in the most sanitary manner possible, and in harmony with the high standard of modern science and hygiene adopted by Seventh Day Adventists.

"A FAIR FIELD."

The Los Angeles Municipal News has a page devoted every week to party politics, one column each being donated free of charge to the different political parties and edited by their representative. We note the issue of July 24th, the page is apportioned as follows: Democrat, County Socialist, Labor Party, Socialist party, Republican County Central Committee and Good Government organization. But on another page as a paid advertisement is the plea of the wicked Republicans who are supporting the National platform and the candidate of the national convention. Underneath the "Party Politics" head we further note the legend, "A fair field and no favor." Thus do the virtuous non-partisans live up to their high-flown professions and continue to do business under false colors. The party that at the last national election polled more votes than the other parties combined is crowded out of this pretended "Nonpartisan" sheet supported by a tax on the citizens regardless of party, in order that some little local side issues in the way of politics shall have ample room for the exploitation of their various views and that a bolting faction of a great party shall be allowed the privilege of sailing under the flag which they are trying to haul down.

C. H. Randall, editor of the Highland Park Herald, condemns the attempts on the part of Los Angeles to gobble up the territory outside of the city, as follows:

"The initiative petition for a constitutional amendment which will permit of the consolidation of cities and counties, or portions of a county with a city, contains a cleverly veiled joker which amounts to a confiscation of the rights of all of the people who live in the county of Los Angeles outside of the city of Los Angeles. By the provisions of such a law, the whole county may be consolidated with the city of Los Angeles by a favorable vote of the entire county. This means that the people of the section to be annexed to the city will have no separate vote upon the matter, but that the overwhelming vote of Los Angeles city would bring these people in whether they favored it or not.

"This is an un-American betrayal and invasion of the rights of the people, and though this newspaper is published in the city of Los Angeles and favors every legitimate project to advance the interests of that city, it will never give its support to such an oppressive scheme as this."

RANDALL A CANDIDATE AGAINST LISSNERISM.

"I propose that we, the three progressive Republican candidates for Congress, shall here and now issue a public statement utterly repudiating any so-called endorsement by Boss Lissner's hand-picked Committee of Fifteen, and that we now unite to preserve for the people the direct primary law, pure in word and spirit. That we condemn a return to "caucus" and "boss" methods, from which California has so recently been emancipated."

This was the ringing proposal made by Charlie Randall of Highland Park, militant anti-boss candidate for Congress, at a meeting of Long Beach Progressives. Bell of Pasadena, who has since been endorsed by Lissner's hand-picked committee, only four of whom are residents of this district, was present and received the proposal in silence.

Randall, who served in the last legislature so satisfactorily to his constituents, is making a campaign of the triumphal kind. From every section comes praise for his independent stand, and for his defiance of the Los Angeles boss.

Our ambition is to supply the needs of the people. Come and see our line of

SOMETHING Going to Happen IN GLENDALE

Just Think, an Upright Piano, Made by one of the Leading Manufacturers in the United States, to be Given Away by The Glendale News Absolutely Free of Charge.

We want every lady in Glendale and vicinity to try and win this Piano. NOW LISTEN. You don't have to work. All that it requires is for you to talk to your friends ten or fifteen minutes a day and tell them while our representatives are getting subscriptions, to place the votes to your credit. We don't expect you to get any subscribers for the simple reason we have employed extra help for this work. When our solicitors call upon some of your friends and if they mention your name you will be credited with the votes, according to how long a time they subscribe for. The scale of votes are 50 votes for one year's subscription, 400 votes for three years' subscription, 1000 votes for a five years' subscription. The price of our paper is $1.50 for one year, $3.50 for three years, and $5.00 for five years, so try and have your friends subscribe for a five years' subscription. By this they are saving $2.50, and you are receiving 1000 votes. This is one of the grandest opportunities you have ever had to win a beautiful Piano without any work on your part at all.

We expect that this contest will be closed in not later than three or four weeks. It is not a proposition that you have to wait six or eight months for, but it will positively close in four weeks time. Of course, we may be in a position to close it in three weeks if the women of Glendale and vicinity will induce their friends to subscribe immediately. We have our agents in the field now, and they are giving each and every subscriber a small ballot. We put your name on this ballot and the results will appear in our paper at every issue until the contest is closed. NOW BE SURE AND COME OVER TO OUR OFFICE IMMEDIATELY AND PUT YOUR NAME DOWN AS ONE OF THE CONTESTANTS. Remember it costs you nothing to register your name, which will appear in our paper every issue, showing just how you stand. We again advise you to come over and register your name immediately.

The Worth of the Kingdom. Matt. xiii:44-53.

Golden Text—Seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness and all these things shall be added unto you. Matt. vi:33.

(1.) Verse 44—What is the value in money of personal religion?

(2.) To what pains and expense ought a person be willing to go if necessary in order to obtain the salvation of his soul?

(3.) From the standpoint of pure statecraft what is Christianity worth to this country?

(4.) What are the chief characteristics of the "joy" experienced when a person obtains personal salvation?

(5.) Would it be right or wrong, and why, if a man should accidentally discover rich treasure in another man's field and hide that fact from the owner and then buy the field for what it was worth minus the treasure?

(6.) Verses 45-46—What would you say in the last analysis is the chief quest in every man's life?

(7.) What are the "goodly pearls" in life which all men should seek?

(8.) What would you say is the "pearl of great price," and how would you describe it?

(9.) What is the best way to seek the "pearl of great price?"

(10.) Verses 47-48—Can you describe the nature of a "drag-net?"

(11.) What would you say is the significance of this drag-net parable as applied to Christianity?

(12.) Who are the fishermen supposed in this parable?

(13.) What does the "sea" represent?

(14.) How many classes of people from a moral standpoint does the gospel story attract and hold under its influence?

(15.) Why would you say, or not, that many members of our churches answer to the description of "bad" fish?

(16.) Verses 49-50—What is your idea of the process which God will take at the end of the world to "sever the wicked from the just?"

(17.) What are the reasons for believing that Jesus did not mean a literal "furnace of fire?"

(18.) If Jesus did not mean that the wicked will be cast into a literal "furnace of fire" what did he mean?

(19.) Does the "wailing and gnashing of teeth" mentioned here indicate rage and disappointment or pain? Give your reasons.

(20.) Verses 51-53—How may we understand the real meaning of Jesus from his highly figurative style of speech? (This is one of the questions which may be answered in writing by members of the club.)

CHAPTER VI.

The Scorn of Ellen.

As the days slipped by she became more like her former self, and one afternoon when it was raining she consented to play a game of billiards with me. Suddenly she stopped, and as I watched her I thought her face perceptibly paled. A moment later there was the sound of horse's hoofs on the gravel, and we heard some one alight.

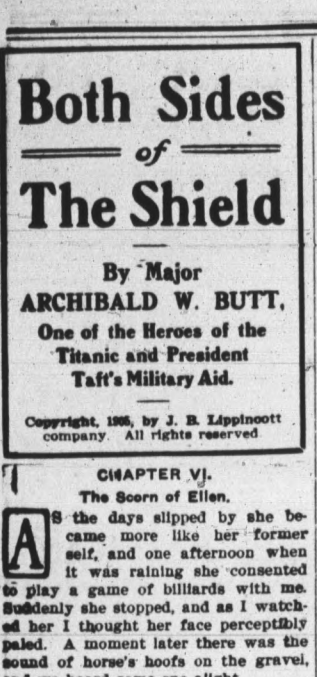
"Come, Mr. Palmer; I am beating you," she said, with an attempt at gayety which was but poorly assumed. "It is your shot, and you stand there dreaming."

Just then Pickaninny Sam came in to tell Miss Ellen that the squire was in the parlor. She seemed irresolute for a moment, and then her face became hard as I had never seen it before. She laid down her cue and started to leave the room without a word. The blood flew to my face and hot words to my tongue; but, restraining myself as best I could, I cried:

"Miss Ellen, if that man has dared to force his attentions on you or to annoy you"—

She bade me hush. "Squire Hawkins is all that is kind and good," she said. "His only wish is to serve me and my family. You must say nothing against him in my presence, Mr. Palmer."

"That man wants to force you into marrying him, Miss Ellen. 'Tis outrageous" I cried, beside myself with anger. "He is old enough to be your father."



"Miss Ellen, if that man has dared to annoy you"—

She smiled sadly and said, "Almost old enough to be my grandfather."

"Surely any fate is better than that. Such a sacrifice would be shameful. If you must sacrifice yourself at all let me"—

She put a stop to my passionate words, and before the mute appeal in her eyes I stood silent.

"I am going, Mr. Palmer, and I must ask you not to speak what may be in your mind. I have a question to solve which no one in the world can help me to answer, and if I could not solve it without assistance I would be unworthy of the regard or friendship of any man. No," she added, for I had opened my lips to speak again the words of love that rose to them. "If you value my good opinion, be silent."

"Miss Ellen," I half whispered, "do you know how it will end?"

"I do not, Mr. Palmer," and she left me a prey to doubts that seemed to tear my soul asunder. When a woman hesitates I thought it always means yes, and had she not told me herself that she did not know how it would end? I spent the remainder of the afternoon in my room in any agony of despair, and in the loneliness of that great, half emptied chamber I cried to God to prevent such a sacrilege. The next day and even the next one after that I never saw her alone for a moment. Once I asked her to let me speak to her, if only for a minute.

"Not yet," she said. "I am not worthy of your kindly thoughts. I wish you could forget me."

Every day now I was expecting a letter from my paper ordering me to leave Oglethorpe. Each morning I rode to the postoffice as if to meet my fate halfway. I was in an agony of suspense. I resolved that if my orders came before I had reached some understanding with Miss Ellen to resign my post and remain in the vicinity of the Pines until I had either won her for my wife or else forced her to declare herself engaged to Squire Hawkins. I never believed that she seriously considered such a step until she had told me to forget her. Even then I would not despair, but I was resolved that if she thought me poor she should continue to think me such until she had become my affianced bride. I fully believed her capable of marrying the squire for the sake of lifting the mortgage and freeing Bud from the drudgery that was telling on his health and, what was worse, breaking his spirit. For herself she did not think. It was for the others. It had always been for the others. I had reason to think that in the matter of worldly goods I was the equal of the squire, but had I told her of this I verily believe that it would have militated against me, for she would not sell herself to the man she loved, while she might sacrifice herself to one whom she regarded almost as an aged relative. I resolved to stand my ground and fight every inch of it with Squire Hawkins, and I was equally determined to tell my love at the earliest moment, so that there could be no mistake as to my intentions.

The opportunity came sooner than I thought, for, the next day being damp and chilly, we remained indoors, Bud alone being forced to face the rain. Mrs. Turpin had gone into the kitchen to get warm, she said, for the sitting room was damp and bad for rheumatism. I was only waiting for the colonel to go for his afternoon nap to speak what was in my mind to Miss Ellen. Presently she looked up from a book she was reading and said:

"Father, there was another of those letters copied in the Augusta papers yesterday."

As I heard her words my heart seemed to cease pulsation. I had never known that they had seen these letters, for they had not spoken of them before, probably because they did not want me to see them. My face grew scarlet, and I was thankful that the room was gloomy and dark.

"Yes, Ellen," he said, "even some of our own people laugh at us when they get rich, so we can't expect our enemies to do less. Have you got the paper, my dear? I had to laugh over that last description of what we had come to. It was very, very funny."

"Funny! Oh, father, to think that you can see anything funny in such misery as he depicted! The writer does not see with the eyes of a gentleman or else he is blinded by prejudice or prosperity. How I should loathe to be such a man! I did not want you to see this last letter, father, so I burnt the paper. It was too true, too true!" she cried, and I saw her eyes fill with tears.

She laid her book aside and went to the window to mend a rent in the lace curtain, but I thought more to hide her feelings from us. "The writer does not see with the eyes of a gentleman." With that one sentence she had shattered to pieces every argument I had used to myself that day in the room. She had not made use of any choice rhetoric, such as I had used to describe her, nor did she study the effect of her phrasing, but with one natural sentence, spoken from the heart, she seemed to paint me as I was or as she would always think of me after this. I realized how far my ambition had carried me and how low my literary instincts, as I had thought them then, had sunk me. In the reaction I saw myself as others would see me, and in my remorse I believed that I had sacrificed her for some temporary advantage in my profession. And I had fancied that she would understand, forgetting that her scale of honor and truth was as far above mine as heaven is above earth. In the silence that followed I suffered a lifetime of ordinary humiliation. To be unknown and yet denounced was like being alone with truth. My identity should be hid no longer, and I resolved to tell her that it was I she had denounced. As low as I seemed at that moment, I was not so low as to take her hand until I had confessed all. The past month rose before me, and I asked myself if I was indeed a gentleman measured from their standpoint. At any rate, I could not remain one and be silent.

The colonel crossed the room and passed out into the hall. I got up and stood leaning on the back of the chair in which I had been sitting.

"Miss Ellen," I said, "I have something important to say to you. It is not what you think," for a pained expression came into her face. "It is a confession I have to make."

"Yes, Mr. Palmer," she said and turned from the window to face me. The sun had come from behind a bank of clouds and crimsoned the checkered panes of glass, and her hair, catching the rays that filtered through them, framed her in a halo and to me gave her the appearance of a saint. Her face was pale, and her long eyelashes were fringed with tears.

"Miss Ellen," I said softly, "it was I who wrote those letters."

For a moment she did not speak, and when she did her voice seemed passionless.

"Then it was you, after all," was what she said. "I had refused to entertain the thought even until you yourself confessed it. Even now it seems too horrible to believe. And I stopped speaking to my best friend merely because she half playfully suggested that it might be you." She said this more to herself than to me.

"Why did you not tell this to me before," I said, "and I would have explained?"

"Why did I not tell you?" she asked, her voice breaking with anguish. "Because I thought you were a gentleman and you were our guest. It would have been an insult to have mentioned it. Such a suggestion would have been a reflection on him you ridiculed and on me, whom you would have made believe you loved had you dared to speak one he upon your lips."

"Love you!" I cried. "I would die for you!"

"It is the only way you could ever prove it now," she said. "Oh," she continued, "if you had only leveled your ridicule at me alone! But father, poor old father! I am glad he will not see that last letter. He would hardly think that one funny."

She looked at me, and her eyes suddenly seemed to blaze with scorn and contempt.

"Yes, I see it all now, and the wonder is I did not see it before. It was he whom you described as a broken down aristocrat who descanted on politics and wrote pieces to the paper telling the president how to run the government. It was mother who dressed in wornout velvet gowns and sat in state at the dinner her daughter had cooked, and it was I who cooked the dinners and played sonatas and nocturnes for the amusement of our guests. God, why did I not see you as you were? Yes, and these are the hands," she cried in anguish and scorn, holding them toward me that I might see them, "that have cooked your meals for the past four weeks, and these are the same hands that played for you while you smoked your pipe and heard father descant on politics! How poor and miserable we must have seemed to you! All that I could have forgiven, but you dared to soil my skin with your kisses. They will burn deep here," she said, pointing to her fingers, "long after your ingratitude has been forgotten."

"Ellen, for God's sake have pity!" I cried. "I have laughed at your poverty as if it were my own. I am rich—I never told this to you before—and I felt that the only use of my wealth in the future would be to relieve the burdens of those you love. This night—nay, this very afternoon—I was going to ask you to be my wife, from which moment your father, mother and brother would have been mine also. It was this very poverty and the fortitude with which you bore it that have made me love you. After you spoke this afternoon I could not tell you of my love until I had confessed first that I was the author of the letters which wounded you so deeply."

"I am glad you spared me that last humiliation. I can never forgive myself for being happy in your company or for spurning the hand stretched out to lift us from this degradation."

"Squire Hawkins," I said in bitterness.

"Yes, Squire Hawkins, whom you would have insulted as you have us. And to think that just because I had listened to him I believed myself unworthy of your love! You must excuse me now," she added in cutting tones, "for I must go to prepare your dinner. I suppose there will be one less to provide for tomorrow!"

She started to leave the room, but I stood in front of her.

"No, I will not go. You do not understand. It was with love welling in my heart that I wrote that last letter. I had been ordered home, and I wrote that letter that I might stay another fortnight. After you had promised to be my wife I would have told you all, and together we would have read it, and in the richness of the future we would have laughed over it together. No, I will not go. I will stay and tell Bud and the colonel. They will understand and plead for me. And if you love me"—

"If I ever did you killed it the moment you confessed to have written so about one you professed to love, one whom you should have protected and have helped to hide from the world that which she feels so degrades her, instead of which you hold it up to publicity and to the scorn of the world. You cannot stay here longer. Don't force me to tell father or my brother. That would be more than I could bear."

She put her hand toward a chair as if to keep her from falling. I came a step nearer, but she drew back involuntarily, steadying herself and looking me in the face, and with a voice vibrating with emotion said:

"Don't touch me! I never want to see you nor to hear of you again!"

She swept past me, and I sank into a chair, overcome with grief and mortification. How long I sat there I do not know. Every time I heard a foot-fall I would start up, expecting her to come back, thinking in my foolish heart that she had relented. Bud came in and found me sitting in the dark. He told me dinner was ready, and we entered the dining room together. Miss Ellen came in late, for it would have been unlike her to have stayed away. In a perfectly natural voice she told them I had been called away. Bud begged me to stay, and the colonel and Mrs. Turpin made me promise to come again. That night was a dismal one. Miss Ellen would not play and soon went to her room. I left the next morning, Bud remaining from his work to drive me to the station. Miss Ellen bade me farewell in the hall, but avoided taking my hand. As the wagon turned into the cedars I looked back, and only the colonel and Mrs. Turpin were standing on the porch to wave me a farewell. I hardly spoke to Bud on the way, but I made him promise that if any one should get ill at the Pines he would write to me at once. At the station I found a letter from the managing editor telling me that my last contribution was the cleverest bit of writing I had ever done and that the paper had advertised another one for the following Sunday.

"Don't touch me!"

I tore his letter into fragments and, going to the telegraph office, wrote out the following telegram and sent it:

Accept my resignation. I will leave for the west tonight on personal business.

I grasped Bud's hand, but was unable to speak a word. I boarded the train and sat for hours, my head resting on my hands, with my face turned toward the Pines, my soul full of sadness, with not a ray of sunlight in my heart.

"CANVAS CITY" NEARING COMPLETION.

About 400 tents have already been erected in "Canvas City," where will be housed 2000 or more delegates to the convention of the Seventh Day Adventist church this month. Fifty more of these small tents will be "built" and will be used by private families. Several larger tents have been put up for various purposes, one of which, size 60x140 feet, to be used as a cafeteria at which 500 diners may be accomodated at one time. This restaurant will be in charge of J. R. Scott of the Loma Linda (Cal.) sanitarium.

The erection of this white city is being done under the supervision of J. F. Gastor, who is being assisted by thirty workmen. All of the tents will be floored with canvas stretched over sawdust.

For each of the last thirteen years this Southern California conference has been held. This year the conference will be presided over by President E. E. Andross, a resident of this city. The Pacific Union conference comprises four local conferences of California and Nevada, and also of Utah and Arizona.

An excellent corps of capable speakers has been secured for this series of meetings, which promises to be the finest ever held here. Pastor Henry Schultz will conduct services in German, while meetings in Spanish will be conducted by Elders J. E. Bond, J. W. Reaser and J. F. Blunt.

CONTRIBUTIONS WANTED BY PHILANTHROPIC COMMITTEE.

All women in Glendale and vicinity interested in the philanthropic work of the Glendale Tuesday Afternoon Club will please bear in mind during this season of putting up fruits that quart jars of the same are always grateful to the following institutions, for whom the committee are working: The Maternity Home, King's Daughters' Day Nursery, Mrs. Vance's Home for Boys.

If each member of the club, or those interested in charities, would contribute one quart of fruit or jelly, the donation would be a great help and a sweet relish for the sick and needy. We need for each institute at least twenty-five jars, and later on a day will be set by the club for gathering. Empty jars to be filled can be left or procured at the grocery store of Mr. McGillis, Brand boulevard, Glendale.

FAREWELL RECEPTION.

Dainty refreshments were served by Mrs. Blackburn, Mrs. Ed Lee and Mrs. John Hunchberger.

STREET IMPROVEMENTS ON THE EAST SIDE.

Just east of the Glendale city limits, Edwards and Wildey and W. J. McCarroll are grading and curbing Carroll avenue running from the boulevard up to the base of the hills. Hill avenue along the base of the hills is also being improved. The matter of grading and otherwise improving Eagle Rock Road from its junction at Sixth street to the Glendale city limits is also being agitated and will no doubt be put through in the near future. This is one of the choicest of the foothill sections and will no doubt come rapidly to the fore, as it affords beautiful villa sites that cannot long be overlooked.
